CAD/HKD has formed a Channel Up on a 1H chart, having breached the long-term simple moving average. Bearing in mind that the currency pair has approached the upper boundary of the channel, we would suspect that the outlook is negative in the short run, given that the bullish resistance line holds buying pressure in the nearest future. Moreover, most of market participants oppose the trend and hold short positions, reinforcing our view.

AUD/USD has formed a Channel Up on a 1H chart after decoupling from the 200-period SMA and rising up to 1.0402. However, traders' sentiment is strongly bearish (74%) towards the pair, which in turn is likely to dip down to 1.0335, the bullish support trend-line, although it does not seem that long-to-short ratio will turn bullish when this happens.
