▶ China second-quarter economic growth seen cooling to 6.6 percent, weakest in seven years

China's economic growth likely cooled to a fresh seven-year low of 6.6 percent in the second quarter as the industrial sector loses steam and a boost from financial services fades...

Xinhua

▶ NATO decides to strengthen security in eastern, southern flank

During the two-day Warsaw Summit, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) took a series of decisions aimed at increasing security both in its eastern and southern flank.

▶ Sterling Fails to Reach \$1.30 Again

Sterling failed to hold gains and declined steeply back to the flat line during the Frankfurt session, with volatility expected to be higher, despite an empty calendar.

FXStreet

▶ Yen weakness helping to drive a more positive sentiment

There is more of a positive feel to market sentiment to start the week.

▶ Asia stocks hit four-week high, look forward to stimulus

Asian shares enjoyed a relief rally on Monday as upbeat U.S. jobs data soothed immediate concerns about the health of the world's largest economy, while the prospect of more policy stimulus helped keep sovereign yields near record lows.

Bloomberg

▶ Falling U.S. oil output not enticing enough for wary investors

Not even a sharp decline in U.S. oil production can convince investors that oil prices are ready to rebound.

▶ Can Gold Sustain Its Recent Gains?

Last week, gold extended its gains and continued to hike consistently higher amid further disappointments in the US fundamental result releases.

Thomas Kee

▶ Why the Fed will raise rates next time

I believe we should expect the FOMC to raise interest rates when it meets on July 26 and makes its decision on July 27. The Fed has been clear that they have been watching economic data closely, and they have claimed that they are largely dependent on that data to make their decision.
